Half a million nights ago I sat upon your floor
Exchanging words of wisdom but wanting so much more
Searching through the jungle of your words to find a way
To get a little closer before the night was day

Twenty thousand nights ago I sat beside your bed
And listened to the problems you keep inside your head
Your Mummy never understood but your Daddy did his best
But he fell beside the wayside like so many in your tests

Getting there is so hard the way you go
Anyway at all - will you ever know?

Nine hundred long nights ago I listened to your song
The words were quite convincing but all the notes were wrong
You tried to sing a love song but you never quite got there
Despite the tired roses you'd tied up in your hair

Last night as I shivered half naked on your floor
Half expecting Jesus to come walking through the door
The embers of my cigarette were heating up your room
As we sat and waited patiently for the comic crash of doom

Getting there is so hard the way you go
Anyway at all - will you ever know?.....NO!
