Hey Mama, can't you see, the sun is slowly rising in the West
 Hey Mama, can't you see, your little boy is trying to do his best
 Watch him paint his pretty pictures, see him slowly lose his mind

Ref:

But he's always looking out for new horizons
 And he knows he'll never find the time

When morning comes again He cannot pull himself up out of bed
 When morning comes again There's nothing really moving in his head
 Watch the sunlight in the window, See the dust begin to shine .....

The night is always black When everything he tries to do goes wrong
 The night is always black When he cannot find the words to write a song
 Watch his thoughts retreat in shadows Hear the ugliness of rhyme .....

But still he tries again To build within his mind another frame
 Still he tries again To give the things he knows another name
 Watch the road forever winding See the world return to slime .....

T'was on a Winter's day, The snow was falling thick and fast
 On a Winter's day, A heavy wind was blowing through the masts
 Watch the sea turn into mountains, Feel the fear begin to climb ....

The circle still remains And keeps him locked within its bubbled glass
 The circle still remains Dissuading all the fools who try to pass
 Watch the man who dies tomorrow, Hear him say he's doing fine
